PREFACE

2270990

THIS UNUSUAL COMPILATION has lain in typescript in the library of the Germantown Historical Society since 1935. It abounds with the kind of curious and out-of-the-way information likely to be helpful to those wishing to augment their knowledge of their German ancestry, for which reason we are delighted to bring out the first published edition of the work.

Arranged by newspaper, and thereunder by date of publication, this work contains abstracts of paid notices, advertisements, and articles pertaining to German settlers in Pennsylvania during the period 1743 to 1800, the data deriving variously from death notices, advertisements for runaway servants, offers of property for sale and lease, offers of goods and services, notices of arrival and removal in the Pennsylvania area, advertisements of letters received and awaiting delivery, and notices placed by persons seeking news of relatives and friends, which sometimes designate place of residence in America and birthplace in Germany.

As it has some bearing on the valuation of the book as a research aid, we might point out that Edward Hocker was the librarian of the Germantown Historical Society and the author, among other publications, of Germantown, 1683-1933, and was therefore admirably suited to the task of searching the local papers for genealogical signposts.

In compiling this material, Mr. Hocker confined his searches to the five principal German newspapers published in Germantown and Philadelphia during the 1743-1800 period, extracting only data of genealogical import and rejecting what was otherwise irreducible or irrelevant to his object. The papers used were Christopher Sower's Germantown Newspaper, 1743-1762 (Pennsylvanische Geschicht-Schreiber, later called Pennsylvanische Berichte); Henry Miller's Staatsbote, 1767-1779; Philadelphische Zeitung, 1756-1757; Philadelphische Correspondenz, 1781-1800; and Germantauer Zeitung, 1785-1790.

Our publication is a verbatim rendering of the original typescript, to which we have added an index of names. Our thanks to Professor Don Yoder for bringing the work to our attention.

PREFACE

The history of the United States is a story of the struggle for freedom and justice. It is a story of the people who have fought for the right to live in peace and harmony with one another. It is a story of the people who have fought for the right to live in a free and democratic society. It is a story of the people who have fought for the right to live in a world of peace and justice.

EXPLANATORY

Spelling of proper names was subject to many variations in Pennsylvania in the eighteenth century. The same person was likely to spell his name differently at different times. Furthermore, printers were at the mercy of wretched manuscript. Christopher Sower added this postscript to an advertisement in his newspaper of April 9, 1762:

"If this is distorted the writer is to blame. Sometimes the purport of a communication may be guessed. But not so with names. Please write names and places plainly." Hence in using the index it is desirable to consult every possible variation of the name sought. Personal names appear as printed in the newspapers. Geographical names usually are in modern form.

Where only names and addresses are given the advertisements from which they are taken usually concern stray cattle or other matters without genealogical value. Names and addresses without further data appear only for the period not covered by the tax lists in the Pennsylvania Archives.

Certain lists of names mentioning birthplaces are from advertisements of letters received from Germany and awaiting delivery in Philadelphia. The postal facilities being primitive, it was the custom to address letters intended for settlers in care of a newspaper publisher or a merchant.

The suffix "in" attached to a family name indicates the female. Thus the wife or daughter of a man named Hoffman would be named Hoffmanin.

As redemptioners had to serve four to six years without pay and often under hard taskmasters, the twentieth century investigator hardly considers it to their discredit if they manifested sufficient spirit to run away.
